Emerald Ash Borer in North Carolina

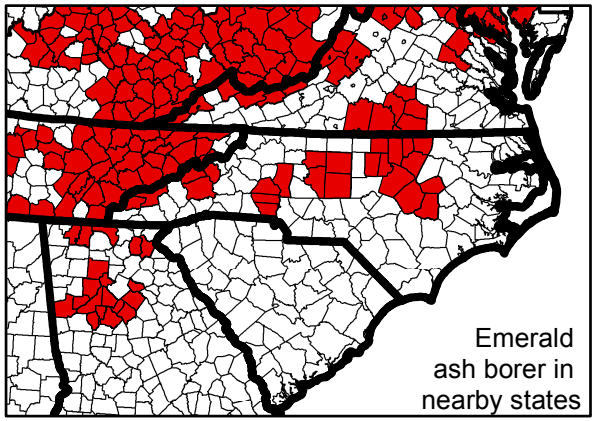
Quarantined Counties

Emerald Ash Borer Detections

Map created 9/26/2016 by K. Oten - FHM Coordinator

N

0 25 50 100 150 200 Miles



The emerald ash borer is a non-native invasive insect that has already killed tens of millions of ash trees in North America.

Susceptible trees in North Carolina are green ash, white ash, Carolina ash, pumpkin ash, and white fringetree. This beetle can spread naturally (by flying) or through the accidental, human-facilitated movement of infested material such as firewood or ash timber.

Found in Firewood
Buy Local
Slow the Spread

NORTH CAROLINA FOREST SERVICE NC